

Abbott on Australia's modest aid cuts

By Jonathan Pryke

19 March 2015

Tony Abbott has defended the cuts to Australian aid as “modest”. Asked at a joint press conference with Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung about his Government's aid cuts, Mr Abbott responded:

Yes, there have been some modest reductions coming up in Australia's aid budget... Our aid budget has been growing very strongly in recent years and we think it's important to pause it and scale it back a bit, before it then starts to grow again in a few years time.

In fact, as readers of this blog will know, the cuts are far from modest. To the contrary, they are the largest multi-year aid cuts ever: adjusting for inflation, the aid budget will be 33% smaller in 2016-17 than it was in the last year before the current government came to power, 2012-13. And the 2015-16 cuts of 20% are the largest aid cuts in a single year. As for aid starting to grow again, all the forward estimates show is a small increase in 2017-18 in line with inflation.

About the author/s

Jonathan Pryke

Jonathan Pryke worked at the Development Policy Centre from 2011, and left in mid-2015 to join the Lowy Institute, where he is now Director of the Pacific Islands Program. He has a Master of Public Policy/Master of Diplomacy from Crawford School of Public Policy and the College of Diplomacy, ANU.

Link: <https://devpolicy.org/abbott-on-australias-modest-aid-cuts/>

Date downloaded: 23 April 2024

Australian
National University

The Devpolicy Blog is based at the Development Policy Centre, Crawford School of Public Policy, College of Asia and the Pacific, Australian National University.