

Devpolicy recruiting new Research/Policy Fellow

Author : Sachini Muller

Date : October 9, 2017

Devpolicy is currently recruiting a new Research Fellow or Policy Fellow to strengthen our research on economic development in and labour mobility/migration from the Pacific and Papua New Guinea. The researcher will form part of Devpolicy's engagement in the DFAT-funded Pacific Research Program, in which Devpolicy is taking the lead on research related to economic development in the region.

The ideal candidate will have expertise in the aforementioned areas, as well as other fields of study in which the Centre specialises, will use quantitative research methods, and will hold a PhD or have equivalent experience in economics, public policy, or a related field.

This is an exciting opportunity for a researcher looking to join a dynamic think tank, which is a leading source of analysis on Australian aid effectiveness, the Pacific and Papua New Guinea, and global development policy.

Further information is available here.